OBJECTS AND REASONS

This Bill is designed to translate into law the tenets of the official new Land Policy published in June 1995 with the object of updating and overhauling our land legislation which dates back from the 1929s. The Bill specifically proposes to repeal, inter alia, the land Ordinance (Cap. 113) and the Land (law of Property and conveyancing) ordinance (cap. 114) with their rather meagre skeletal provisions. It is intended to enact a more explicit and full bodied "Land Act" which will be more readily understood and responsive to the needs of Tanzania in the context of a liberalised economy and an emerging land market. At the same time the proposed Bill will cut off the umbilical cord which still links us to antiquated English principles and practices of conveyancing. An autonomous Tanzania conveyancing system will develop if the Bill is passed into law.

The bill is divided into fourteen Parts and one schedule. It does not deal with village land for which a separate law will be enacted.

Part I sets out preliminary matters. Part II enshrines the fundamental principles of the National Land Policy. Part III lays down the classification of land into three categories, i.e. general land, reserved land and village land. All these lands are vested in the President as trustee. Part IV deals with administrative matters such as the role of the Minister, the commissioner for lands and other officers in the Ministry of Lands.

Part V is concerned with the rights to occupy land. Part VI specifically addresses the granted rights of occupancy. Part VII set out the requirements for the validation of irregular interests in general land. Part VIII is concerned with dispositions of land, while leases are covered in Part IX and mortgages in part X. Easements are dealt with part XII. Land disputes will be settled in the for a laid down in part XII. Part XIV contains miscellaneous matters.
